

CLASSIC COIR

Classic Coir is the main coir fibre product used for growing a variety of plants. This is a high quality coir product manufactured from the pith of the coconut husk. It is a finer grade product containing pith material as well as coconut fibres which adds extra amounts of air. Classic Coir material is selected on its pH and EC values from clean sources in mountainous regions of Sri Lanka.

Classic Coir is a wonderful product used for all types of plant growth. In the bale form it is easily reconstituted and used for potting media or as a component with other materials such as bark for general potting. A variety of slabs are available for use in much more specialised applications. Slabs are encased in a plastic sleeve with drain holes and plant holes cut to specification. Re-hydration is easy. Slabs range from the Strawberry Slab (48x20x8cm) especially used for growing smaller plants to the larger slabs for tomatoes and flowers. They are excellent for the home grower as well as the large horticulturalist.

A variety of product sizes are available and growing advice is available by our technical consultants in Holland.
